GACAR works to improve community through smart growth

Smart growth is a hot topic for communities across the United States. As the population grows communities must also decide how to grow. Growth is not only for the immediate needs, but also the future needs. How to meet all the needs of community creates a lot of discussion.

The Gainesville-Alachua County Association of REALTORS (GACAR) has partnered with the Gainesville Community Redevelopment Agency (GCRA) to hold two smart growth community conversations. One community meeting will be part of the GCRA Strategic Planning meeting. The other community meeting will be held at GACAR December 1st from 8:45-11:00am. Smart growth pioneer, Joe Minicozzi with Urban3, will give a presentation on smart growth and the tax revenue implications using our local property data. City and County Commissioners, planning staff, and other community members will be in attendance to listen and discuss smart growth in our community.

GACAR is excited to be involved in the smart growth conversation. REALTORS depend on a strong sustainable vibrant community which is why GACAR is so excited to bring these conversations to our community. Smart growth is vital to the real estate industry.
